REDSTONE CONSULTING GROUP AND EMERGIFI PARTNER TO IMPROVE CREDIT UNIONS' READINESS FOR CYBER EXAMS

Huntsville, AL (May 31, 2019) - Starting in 2019, all credit unions of more than $250M in assets are subject to examination using the NCUA's expanded ACET based cybersecurity exam. Redstone Consulting Group's (RCG) ACET Collaboration Portal helps credit unions save time and resources when preparing for the exam by organizing tasks, enabling role-based collaboration, and providing secure document storage. With the Emergifi partnership, The ACET Collaboration Portal is now available to credit unions coupled with assistance from Emergifi's managed security, endpoint security, vCIO and compliance services. Annual subscription fees are tied to a credit union's asset base and may be as low as $2,000 per year for full functionality and unlimited users.

The ACET Collaboration Portal provides a cloud-based platform that consolidates work into one place, enforces a tailorable workflow, enables role-based access and progress tracking, and secures the electronic storage of supporting documents via Virtual StrongBox™. The Portal also streamlines exam preparation with an intuitive, project-centered interface, so you know where you stand before the NCUA exam begins. The interface includes integrated progress dashboards for individuals and project owners, with historical tracking of decision process and prior year responses.

"Many of our clients struggle to thoroughly prepare for their NCUA examinations. Cyber security is a particularly challenging area because it impacts all aspects of operating a credit union. Expertise from many teams within the CU must come together effectively. Meeting extensive documentation requirements adds to the complexity," said Emergifi President Greg Tushaus. "The portal will simplify and organize the preparation process for our clients. Its built-in repository, guidance, workflow, and evidence linking capabilities makes exam prep much easier. Cloud-based access also makes the process of helping our clients prepare straightforward for my team."

"We're pleased to be working with Emergifi to support their credit union clients as they take on the complex challenge of preparing for the new NCUA ACET cybersecurity exam," said Steve Powers, President of Redstone Consulting Group. "Partners like Emergifi help us to ensure that the ACET Collaboration Portal is the best tool in the industry for cyber exam preparation."
